

6 Facts About Growing Enrollment Referrals From High School Counselors

April 2017 survey findings from 1,300 high school counselors nationwide

1

Email is counselors' preferred way to receive important college news

METHODS TO RECEIVE IMPORTANT COLLEGE NEWS, IN PRIORITY ORDER

Email from the college or university

Visit from an admissions representative

Telephone call from the college or university

Social media updates, Facebook, Twitter, etc.

2

High school counselors' referrals are most influenced by program availability, quality, and financial aid

COUNSELORS' REFERRAL FACTORS, IN PRIORITY ORDER

99.5%

School has programs that the student is interested in

97.2%

Quality of the program that the student is interested in

95.5%

Availability of financial aid and scholarships

92.8%

Cost

90.4%

Overall reputation of the school

87.6%

A strong record of job placement for graduates

85.9%

Quality of faculty as teachers

77.6%

Professors who are experienced in their field

70.4%

Quality of athletic programs (if the student is an athlete)

68.1%

A diverse student body

66.9%

Percentage of students who are admitted to college (selectivity)

54.3%

Campus social life

Percentages = Proportions of counselors who indicated each factor was "important" or "very important" in influencing referrals (Rating scale had four options: Important, very important, not very important, and not important at all)

SOURCE OF DATA: Proprietary findings from a Ruffalo Noel Levitz online survey of high school counselors. Respondents represented 1,312 public and private high schools serving nearly 1,000,000 students.

RUFFALO
NOEL LEVITZ

High School
Counselor Marketing
HIGHSCHOOLCOUNSELORMARKETING.COM

3

What counselors want to see in emails from colleges

(listed in order of priority)

SPECIFIC INFORMATION

Counselor newsletters with updates, changes, and important summarized information

Links and emails counselors can forward to students and parents

Information for 9th and 10th graders so they are ready for admission

Checklists of steps and requirements for applicants

Help with summertime outreach to rising seniors who haven't yet made college plans

EMAIL USE IN GENERAL

Timely follow-up in response to email requests

Consistent communication through the year

Be clear about what makes the institution different

4

About ½ of counselors have a specific plan for working with first-generation students

46.9%

YES

we have a specific plan to work with students whose parents did not attend college

NO

we do not have a plan

53.1%

5

What counselors want from colleges to help them counsel student-athletes

(listed in order of priority)

SPECIFIC REQUESTS

1) Include athletics in your high school visit— bring a coach or an assistant coach

2) Have information on the website we can print or direct parents of athletes to read

3) Provide emails we can forward to student-athletes and parents

4) Coordinated effort between admissions and athletics at the college level

5) Information to share with parents on the value of athletics at college, especially in small colleges (this is especially important for parents who are not college graduates)

6) Information on academic expectations for student-athletes, both for admission and once they enroll in college

7) Checklist of steps for eligibility and for the application process

8) Information on types of support athletes have once enrolled: physical, academic, and emotional resources

COMMUNICATION IN GENERAL

Increase communication with counselors regarding student-athletes

Transparency, clarity, and honesty in the recruitment process

6

Counselors estimate 60 percent of parents set up campus visits and 56 percent complete application forms

WHAT COLLEGE PLANNING ACTIVITIES DO YOU SEE PARENTS INVOLVED IN?

76.0%

Facilitating the process by talking to their children about options for college

59.7%

Setting up campus visits

67.0%

Visiting campuses with their children

56.1%

Completing application forms

63.3%

Searching the internet for colleges that might be a good match

40.0%

Completing inquiry forms to get more information

59.9%

Talking with counselor about the best options

34.8%

Coordinating transcript requests on behalf of their children

KEY TAKEAWAYS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

In the new age of student-driven marketing, it is key for high school counselors to have continuous access to relevant and timely information to pass on to students and parents. Make sure your flow of digital and traditional communications highlights academic program lists, academic quality, and financial aid. Make it easy for counselors to obtain concise information using direct phone numbers, direct email addresses, dedicated web pages, and search engine optimization. And remember to include parents in your communications and visit programs—they are more involved today than ever!

Colleges and universities should also provide counselors with tailored information to share with specific groups such as first-generation students and student-athletes. To avoid unrealistic expectations, student-athletes and their parents need accurate and consistent college planning information from all departments at the college. Further, first-generation students and their parents need consistent and caring support with application and financial aid forms; simplified forms; step-by-step processes; timelines; reminders; deadline extensions; and information on programs, scholarships, and visitor programming specifically for them.

DON'T FORGET TO:

- Carefully plan high school visits and follow-up (same admissions staff member visits and communicates).
- Quickly respond to emails and calls from counselors, students, and parents.
- Make email a central part of your counselor communication plan.

SOURCE OF DATA: Proprietary findings from a Ruffalo Noel Levitz online survey of high school counselors. Respondents represented 1,312 public and private high schools serving nearly 1,000,000 students.

Call 888 237-0969 today for further information on how we can help you reach High School Counselors or email sales@highschoolcounselormarketing.com
Further information: Go to HighSchoolCounselorMarketing.com